Center for American Progress Privacy Policy

Introduction

The Center for American Progress (“CAP”) is committed to protecting the privacy and security of your online information. In addition to telling you how we use your information, we provide you with choices regarding personal information you share with us. Still, to be clear, some information is collected automatically when you visit us online to maintain the safety and security of our websites and to help improve their contents. You may choose to share other information with us through our various interactive applications.

This Privacy Policy is designed to inform you about what information we collect on our websites, how we use that information, what that information looks like, and what choices you have. If you still have further questions about our privacy practices, we encourage you to contact us:

Information We Collect Automatically (Non-Personally Identifiable Information)

What Do We Collect?

There are certain types of information a website automatically collects as users browse its pages. Like most organizations, CAP maintains logs of website activity for administrative purposes, to ensure the safety and security of the site and its users, and for use in improving its sites.

CAP collects non-personally identifiable data in an aggregated and/or anonymous form. “Aggregated data” refers to general, abstracted information regarding visitors and users of our website. This may include:

- Traffic patterns – information about what pages you visit on our websites and when, how long you remain on each page, the order in which you view pages, and the website or search engine that lead you to our page.
- Which links on our website you click on.
- Information about your web browser – the name and version of the browser you use to visit our sites, the capabilities of the browser (e.g., what technologies it supports such as Java or Adobe Flash).
• Information about your computer – many web browsers report the operating system and screen size of the computer that you are using. This information helps the browser and the website communicate to better display the website.

• Internet Protocol (IP) address – this is the address of your computer on the Internet at the time it communicates with our website. This number may or may not be unique. It is sent anytime you connect to another computer on the Internet, including when you browse the Web.

• Some browsers report whether or not you have bookmarked any of the pages of our websites.

How Do We Use This Information?

CAP primarily uses this information to improve our websites. It can, for example, help us diagnose problems such as if a particular browser is having difficulty displaying one of our pages. We also use this information to maintain the security of our website. IP address logs can, for example, help us determine if someone is trying to hack one of our websites. Some of this information may be used automatically to determine how to display a website to you. If your browser does not support Java, for example, our web servers may send a different version of a page to you so that it displays correctly on your computer. Additionally, we may combine automatically collected information with other data we have about you, including personally information you have voluntarily provided to us to better tailor our advocacy and fundraising activities. If we combine your personally identifiable information with any non-personally identifiable information, we will not share this combined information with any unaffiliated third parties other than as disclosed in this policy.

What Choices Do You Have?

Most of the information we collect automatically is provided as a result of how web browsers and the Internet work. Some web browsers may allow you to limit how, or if at all, some of this information is reported. Two computers on the Internet cannot communicate without sharing IP addresses. However, there may be software commercially available that can help obscure your IP address and aid in browsing the Web anonymously.

Cookies and Clear GIFs

Several features of our websites use a technology known as “cookies.” Cookies are small files your web browser stores on your computer. They are primarily used to allow websites to “recognize” you when you return, such as when a website “remembers” you so you need not login each time you visit that website. Most web browsers can be set to reject cookies. However, if you choose to reject cookies, you may not be able to experience the full functionality of our websites.

Our newsletters use a common technology known as “clear GIFs” (sometimes known as “web beacons”) to track who reads them. Clear GIFs are small, transparent images placed in the HTML version of our email newsletters that are specially coded to report when someone reads an email. Many email clients will not automatically load images. If you do choose to load images in emails you receive from us, these Clear GIFs will likely be triggered. If you do not wish to notify us when you have read one of our newsletters, you should set your email client not to automatically load images.

Information You May Choose to Share With Us (Including Personally Identifiable Information)

Our websites have several features that allow you to interact with us and other members of our online community. CAP does not automatically collect personally identifiable information of users of our websites without their consent, which is provided by use and submission of personal information. Whether or not you use these features is completely your choice. If you choose to use some or all of these features, we may need to collect information about you, some of which may personally identify you. In most cases, we collect this information to distinguish you from other users of our websites. In some cases, we need this information either to comply with the law (e.g., when collecting payment information for online donations) or to provide the service you request (e.g., processing donation transactions or if you subscribe to one of our newsletters).

Many of our interactive services are hosted through third-party service providers. In most cases, we control the information, and our Privacy Policy applies to how that information will be used. Our contracts with these vendors provide that they will abide by our requirements. The following contains information about various services we offer as well as information about and links to, some of our vendors’ privacy policies for your reference.

Email Newsletters and Other Lists

Data collected: email address, name,* zip code*
Optional data: title, organization
* this information is optional to sign up for some email lists

CAP maintains lists of people interested in our issues. If you choose to provide your name and email address, we can send you information and updates about topics of interest to you. We will send you this information based on the interests you indicate, or if it is evident from your job title or organization that the information may be of professional interest to you. The types of information we send includes items such as periodic newsletters and notifications about events. We may separately email you regarding fundraising and donations to CAP or an affiliate of CAP.

Some of our newsletters contain links to web pages. Clicking on those links may cause a cookie to be set on your browser that tracks the fact that you clicked on the link. Most browsers can be set not to accept cookies. If you do accept this cookie, it will track subsequent visits to our website unless you first clear the cookie from your browser and set your browser to block the cookie.

If you do not wish to receive a particular email newsletter from us, you may follow the “unsubscribe” link located at the bottom of the mailing.
We use Eloqua to power our email newsletters and other lists. You can learn more about Eloqua’s practices by visiting its Privacy Policy. However, Eloqua’s privacy policy will only apply to information collected directly by Eloqua and not information collected by CAP through this website.

Our Blogs

Data collected: email address, username
Optional data: alternate nickname, website, IM screen name(s), biographical information or other information you provide

CAP maintains blogs on issues we examine. The blogs have the ability to allow visitors to post replies. In order to post replies, users must first register for an account. When you register for an account, we collect your email address and a username you select. This information will be used to uniquely identify you and validate your account. You may also choose to provide us with your name, an alternate nickname (instead of your email address), the address of your website, your instant messaging screen name(s), and any biographical information you wish to share. Our blogging system may place a cookie on your browser. This cookie only serves to “remember” you when you next visit our blog so that you do not have to enter your login information each time you post a comment on our blog.

Our blogs are powered using a common blogging service, DISQUS. You can learn more about DISQUS practices by visiting its Privacy Policy, which is posted here. However, the DISQUS privacy policy will only apply to information collected directly by DISQUS and not information collected by CAP through this website.

Online Donations

Data collected: name, address, zip code, email, payment card information
Optional data: (see below for information regarding anonymous donations)

We are pleased to accept donations via our secure, online donation system hosted by Salsa Labs. Salsa Labs’ privacy policy is located here. Salsa Labs processes payments through PayFlow, a secure, PCI-compliant product offered by PayPal. PayPal’s privacy policy is located here. PayPal stores and processes transactions using industry-standard security measures including physical, technical, and administrative safeguards consistent with applicable U.S. state and Federal regulations. You can learn about Salsa Labs and PayFlow’s practices by clicking the links above. However, the Salsa Labs and PayFlow privacy policies will only apply to information collected directly by Salsa Labs and PayFlow, respectively, and not information collected by CAP through this website.

Certain information is necessary to process an online payment. To donate online, you must provide a credit card number, the expiration date of the credit card, and a security code found on the card. You also must provide the full name, address, and zip code as listed on the cardholder’s account, as well as an email address for confirmation. We cannot process a donation online without this information.

If you do choose to allow your information to be shared with us, we will only use it in accordance with this Policy, such as to send you future email updates on our development and fundraising efforts, other organizational activities and to seek donations. Even in such event, your credit card account information is not shared with us.

Although we cannot do so online, we are always happy to accept fully anonymous donations. You may mail such donations to:

Center for American Progress
1333 H Street NW, 10th Floor
Washington, DC 20005
Attention: Development

You may also reach us by phone at 202-682-1611 or email at donate@americanprogress.org.

Contact Us

Data collected: name, email address, subject and text of your inquiry
Optional data: company/employer, city, state, zip code

Our websites have an online form through which you can contact us with questions, concerns, to report problems with our website, and other issues. In order to respond to you, we need your name and email address. We will not use this information for any purpose except to respond to your inquiry unless we first receive your permission to do so.

We would also like to know a little more about you to better respond to your inquiry. You may choose to provide the name of your company or employer, your city, your state/territory, and/or your zip code. Providing all of this information is completely optional.

Other Interactive Services

We may provide additional interactive services on our websites. Your use of such services is always optional. If you have a question about any of our privacy practices that is not covered in this Policy, please contact us.

Special Note About Your Provision of Information to Interactive Services

You should be aware that profile information in interactive features may be viewable by other users or participants of such services. Similarly, any communications you submit or post to a blog, message board or other interactive feature may be viewable by other participants or users of the service. Therefore, you acknowledge and understand that you have no expectation of privacy or confidentiality in the content you submit for profiles or to such interactive features, whether or not it contains personally identifiable information about you. If you make your profile available to other users or if you display your personal information in any communication submitted to any such interactive features, other individuals may collect and use your personal information. We are not responsible for, nor can we guarantee the protection of, any personal information you make available in a profile, that you disclose in a communication submitted to such interactive features for posting, or contained in an email submitted to us for posting, and thus, you acknowledge that if you disclose personal information in any such material, you do so at your own risk.

Links to Other Websites and Social Networking Services

On the web, it can be easy to move from one organization’s web sites to another without realizing it. Our websites contain links to third-party websites that are provided for your convenience. These include social networking sites like Facebook, Twitter, Flickr and YouTube, which we use both to communicate with our supporters and to advance our agenda. While we supply the content for our pages on some sites such as Facebook, Twitter, YouTube, and Flickr, information you provide while using those services will be subject to the privacy policies of each respective social networking service. We strongly encourage you to review their privacy policies:

- Twitter: http://twitter.com/privacy
- YouTube: http://www.youtube.com/t/privacy (including the Google Privacy Policy)
- Flickr: http://www.flickr.com/privacy_policy.gne

CAP does not endorse nor is it responsible for the privacy practices or the content of social networking sites or other third party websites to which we link. We encourage you to pay close attention to which organization’s website you are visiting. If there is not a link to this privacy policy on a website you are visiting, then you are on a non-CAP website. We recommend that you review the privacy policies, terms of use, and other policies that govern those websites if you choose to visit them.

Sharing Information with Third Parties

We may share information we collect about you with our affiliates. However, we do not share your personal information with unaffiliated third parties except as disclosed in this policy or as otherwise notified. Like most organizations, we use third parties to provide some of our online services. We have taken steps to ensure that those third parties respect your privacy consistent with this Policy. When you submit information through a CAP website, the use of that information will governed by this Policy. However, if you submit information through a third party’s website (such as following a link to our Facebook page and then submitting information on Facebook), the privacy policies of that third party will govern how they can use your information.
If you attend one of our events, we may occasionally share the RSVP list with an organization partnering with us on the applicable event. If you do not wish your information to be shared in this manner, please contact us.

CAP complies with all valid law enforcement, court, and other governmental orders. This may mean that at some point we will be required by law to disclose your information to a third party, such as a law enforcement agency or pursuant to a civil subpoena, regardless of the other provisions of this Policy.

We may also use or disclose your information as permitted by law to collect debts, fight fraud or protect the rights or property of CAP, our employees, our supporters, our website and its users or third parties, or when, in our discretion, we otherwise believe in good faith that the law requires it.

What Choices Do you Have?

As explained in the sections above, we provide you with certain choices about how your information is used and shared, including:

- the ability to set your browser to reject cookies;
- the ability to unsubscribe from any of our mailing lists via a link provided at the bottom of every email sent to that list;
- the ability to read our blogs without registering, and the ability to limit some of the information you provide if you do choose to register;
- the choice to make anonymous donations via U.S. Mail instead of via our webform;
- the ability to contact us and request that we not share any of the information you’ve provided with unaffiliated third-parties; and

We will also make reasonable efforts to correct or delete information we’ve collected about you upon your request. However, at times we may not be able to honor such requests due to administrative, legal, or other reasons.

Security

CAP has in place administrative, technical, and physical safeguards to protect the information that is under our control. We use industry-standard encryption technologies when transferring and receiving sensitive personal and financial data from our site. Please note, however, that security breaches can occur even if reasonable steps are taken to prevent such breaches; for example, we cannot guarantee that information provided through our sites will not be accessed without authorization on our servers or intercepted while being transmitted to us over the Internet. Please contact us if you believe there has been any breach of the security of our sites.

Children’s Privacy
Our website is directed towards adults. CAP does not knowingly collect information from children under the age of 13 online.

Problem Resolution

If you have a question, concern, or other issue with our Privacy Policy, or if you think our Policy is being violated, we urge you to contact us. You may use the contact us form or the contact information provided in the introduction to this policy.

If you want to know what information we have collected about you, or wish to correct information you believe we have about you, please use the contact information provided in the introduction to this policy.

Changes to this Privacy Policy

We may occasionally update this Privacy Policy. When we do, we will provide and/or revise a “last updated” date at the bottom of this policy. We will also provide a link to our previous privacy policy, so you can see what’s changed.
